TWADDLE ACQUITTED OF RECKLESS DRIVING

DENT IN BRUNSWICK JULY 23,

John A. Twaddle of Bethel was acquitted of the charge of reckless driving, in the Brunswick Municipal Court last Monday. This charge was brought as the result of an accident and a Star touring car driven by night of Saturday, July 23, when his True Eames, connected as Mr. Eames car struck Charles Stubbs, 74 year old pencil vendor. The man was taken by Twaddle to a physician and later to the Brunswick hospital where he remains. One leg was badly broken LADIES' NIGHT AT below the knee.

Twaddle, with Robert Littlehale, also of Bethel, was returning from Boothbay when, meeting the bright lights of another car, he was unable to see Stubbs until about four feet thirty-five mlles an hour,

PRESIDENT OF N. E. POULTRY GROUP TO ADDRESS ASSEMBLY

F. R. Hazard, a poultryman of Sanderstown, R. I., and president of the Northeastern Poultry Producers Council will address the poultrymen assembled at the Second Annual Poultry School to be held at the College of Agriculture, Orono, August 15 and 16. the committee on arrangements announced today.

Mr. Hazard is scheduled to speak at 2 p. m. the first day on the subject, "Northeastern Poultry Producers Council and Its Program," He will also address the banquet to be held on Monday evening. This announcement was made today by the committee in charge of arrangements.

The Northeastern Poultry Producers Council consists of an affiliation of recognized poultry associations of the Northeastern states consisting of the New England states, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia. The committee has invited Mr. Hazard to participate in their Second Annual Poultry School believing that the program being sponsored by this Council s of vital interest to the poultry producers of Maine.

This event will be the second annual meeting of the poultrymen at Orono. Last year there were over two hundred poultrymen in attendance. Detailed programs are now being mailed to those who request them from the College of Agriculture, Orone, Maine. Those planning to attend should make reservations for rooms. Board and room at the dormitories may be obtained for $1.80 a day.

TIME BUDGET IN HOME GIVES MORE LEISURE

Omitting the daily dusting of the ks of chairs or the top of the plano are sensitive to the beauties of order and cleanliness. The old-fashioned and hopeless proverb, "Man's work is from sun to sun, but woman's work is never done" can now be replaced by the twentieth century challenge "Manage time or time will manage you," believes Edna M. Cobb, home management specialist, University of Maine; who suggests a time budget.

She says: "Scheduling and dispatching work are the twins used in getting the housework done so there is a little time left over for the enrichment of family life. Some housewives are good at making schedules, but can't seem to make them work; others are so busy dispatching work as the tasks come along one after another that the day is spent in confusion, and night brings only weariness and the promise of another day just like the one before "Before making out a time scedule, however, it is well to weigh values, consider what are the most important things to be done each day, if some of the non-essentials may be lessoned or eliminated altogether. "Then one must know how long it takes to do each task. The only way to find out is to keep a time record for a few days If one did no more than that, it would be quite illuminating to know how many unnecessary minutes are sometimes spent on one task because of the wrong kind of arrangement of equipment, the wrong time of day or week when the task is customarily performed, the lack of delegating tasks that other members of the fam-My can do as well or better than mother herself. "Making the time schedule or the time budget consists of the following: 1 List the important things to be done, with the time each will take.

Arrange in order. Allow time for interruptions, for some are sure to come and are poavoidable, others may be avoided by careful planning.

if there are no interruptions, time can be used for less important

Eight pages, for a weekly, is standard. I have seen one or more others that carried a greater number, but I invite you to make a comparison of the contents. Be fair-minded:-See what a scope of reading matter this paper offers you each week. A "fiveminute" inspection of the ordinary weekly drains all that is really worthwhile: outside of the advertisements. Then it finds its way into the wastebasket to be drawn upon later to kindle fires. Money spent that way is wanteful, Indeed;-the pocket-book is thinner; and, the thirst for informaflon to not satisfied. But, The Citizen Capt Elmer it Ason collect out to Saved by a prince from a hydra-head, takes a lively interest and a pride in furnishing news and stories that interest every member of the family. In the end her judgment, and what she called her common sense, and her distaste for the sordidness of the rou tine of comparative poverty, stacked up against what she called her schoolgirl romanticism, and one morning, in the Middle West city. Thomas re celved the letter which permanently severed their provisional engagement.

Afterward, as Emanie told herself. she realized to what extent she had hovered on the edge of folly. Once the letter had been written dismissing Thomas, it seemed to her that all her came flowing to hedge her in further from the folly of what she had contemplated. Once that letter was written and mailed. It seemed incredible to Emanie that she had ever even hovered on the edge of indecision.

Three months later, her salary was increased thirty-three and one-third per cent, and at the end of two years her photograph had appeared in a popular magazine as one of the ten highest-salaried women in the country.

She has a three-story house now, on one of the smart East side streets of the city, which she shares with a woman friend who is almost equally successful in another field of endeavor. Their joint Sunday evening at homes are among the most popular in an exclusive and sophisticated set of professional and social men and women. At forty, Emanle is chic, wordly wise, traveled, successful and filled with the divers interests of a demanding and complex business life, a busy social whirl, good clothes, good food, and even better business prospects.

She and her woman friend, however, plan to retire one of these days and take a hunting trip into East Africa that will consume several years.

So it came about that, I ter in the afternoon, three cars might have been seen speeding over the Ithe's Reak highway. Well in the lead was a Pleetwing, with two men to the rear sent and a third at the which Far in the rear were a Nordyke (mousine and a blue roadster. And though the two men in the bine car thought they were following the Nordkye, this order was reversed; It was the Ilmousine that was following the roadster.

CHAPTER VI

Without Warning Evening found the blue roadster at Marysville, Kan., where a stop was made for dinner. Inquiry along the way had proved that the Fleetwing was still on ahead; but of the ilmousine they had heard nothing.

Confident, however, that theirs was the rearmost of the three cars, they covered another hundred miles before stopping for the night in a small town. Since there was no public garage, they put the roadster under a shed in the favore yard, where the intkeeper assured them it would be safe, and went to bed.

The next morning, at breakfast, the imkeeper burst in upon them to ask if they had laded the car before leaving it. "I didn't," said Markbam promptly

Markham arranged to have the car salvaged and held subject to his order. and when the westhound train came along they boarded it. Markliam consulted a time-eard folder and passed the towns ahead in review.

"Colly, at two-fifty this afternoon." he said. "It's a junction point, and if we can't fird what we want, we can get a train from there to Denver, Colby's our drop-off."

Accordingly they debarked at Colby. where Markham found be was able to replace the wrecked roadster with a later model of the same make, Starting without loss of time, they reached Linon, the point at which the two main auto roads, coincident west of Colby, split-one leading southwest to Colorado Springs, and the other northwest to Denver.

At the few stops they had made west of Colby they got no news of the Fleetwing or of Canby's car. But at Limon the lost trall reappeared. The Fleetwing had passed through some six hours earlier on the way to Denver; and Canby's Housine had taken the same route three or four hours later.

Markham looked at his watch. "Both parties are probably stopping over night in Denver. If we push along we can be there by midnight. What do you say?"

"I'm with you. I can spell you at the wheel when you are tired."

It was well past midnight when the lights of Denver came in sight. Reach ing the city, Markham turned in at the first all-night garage he came to, and they forthfared, stiff, tired and dusty, to nut up at the nearest hotel, and turned in at once.

The attempt to trace three newcom ers-or at most six-in a city the size of Denver is much like looking for a needle in a haystack; and though they went short on sleep and were up early he next morning, eight o'clock found them still driving from one hotel to another, drawing blanks and losing

"There is simply no end to this, Wally," Landis protested. "We might keep on all day to a city with as many hotels as there are here. Our best chance is the open road. We know where Canby is headed for. If we trall him, maybe we'll find the Fleetwing in the same gallery."

"You didn't beat me to it by more than half a minute," Markham returned, spreading the well-used road map on his knees. "Here's the nearest cut to the Timanyoni," he pointed out. "We'll get the grips and try our fuck to the open, as you say."

For a short run over the highway the trail refused to reveal itself. But later they came to a filling station chose keeper told them he had helped change an inner tube on a Fleetwing Eight between six and seven o'clock that morning. He said there were three men in the car, and he also recalled that the one he had helped with the tire and said they were from Louisville.

Questloned, he said he had no recollection of seeing a Nordyke ilmousine, but that it might easily have gone by without his noticing it.

Markham glanced at the clock on the dash as he flung the new roadster at the mountain grades.

"Three hours ahead of us; we're gaining on them, in spite of the Denver delay. Where do you suppose this chase is going to wind up. Owen?"

"I'm not so much concerned about the 'where' on the 'how.' I may no well confess that I'm on the fence again. There haven't been and bank blastings this side of the Mescart

"No; but there was a perfectly ment randster wreshed back there in kap-

It was at a water tank station on the Pacific Southwestern that they first board of the Nordske ilmonsine. It was ahead of them; had apparently been ahead all day. They had stopped at a filling station to get gas, and to ask about the Flectuing, and the gas man Printet.

"Lou'll bare to step on it some to ratch up with them felters in the Elala," he told them, "They palled up here couply hours ago and told me they'd made it from Denver since mornin'." Then, "What's the matter with that bunch? Everbody seems to be achin' alumi 'cia."

It was Landls who spoke first when the two were once more on their WAY.

By this time the road had left the narrow valley of the Pannikin. Knowing from the itinerary in the route book that there were hazards ahead on the descent to the Red desert edge mining town of Copah, and hoping to be able to have daylight for the negotinting of them, Markham did not spare the car on the way up. Nevertheles, it was coming on dusk when they found themselves entering upon the bazardous descent, with the lights of Copali winking in the distance.

It was while they were sliding sliently down the steep grades that they passed a large closed car stopped midway on one of the tangents, as if its occupants had halted to view the sunset glories.

"Sightseers," said Markham; and then, suddenly, "Say, Owen; wasn't

LETTERHEADS as we print them evidence your business progress

Legal Term "Indenture" Legal documents of varied type and value have accumulated in the collec tions of the Business Historical Soclety of Boston. A recent bulletin of the society calls attention to the penmanship, especially the words, "This Indenture" with which a document. dating from James II, begins. The document gives rise to the bulletin's juotation from Adam Smith to explain intriente legal language:

"It has been the custom in modern Europe to regulate, upon most ocensions, the payment of attorneys and clerks of court according to the numher of pages which they had to write; the court, however, requiring that each page should contain so many lines, and each line so many words. In order to increase their payment, the attorneys and clerks have contrived to multiply words beyond all necessity."

The word "indenture" in law has an Interesting use. Formerly, in executing a deed in counterpart, both parts of the document were on a single sheet with a blank strip left between them. The two parts were then de-tached or "indented" by being cut apart in an irregular line.

Ancient Belief in Luck

of Four-Leafed Clover The idea that a four-leafed clover will bring luck to the one who finds it is an ancient superstition, and there can be no way of learning for a certainty how it started. Old writers suggest that its resemblance to the form of the cross is the root of the notion.

"The person who carries a leaf of the four-leafed or crusiform clover about with him," asserts one of these. will be successful at play, and he will dream of his beloved, or the maiden may, by slipping a leaf into her lover's shoe without his knowledge as he is about to set out on a journey, secure his sure and safe return to her embrace.

It may be noted that the threeleafed clover also had much virtue, because it symbolized the Trinity, and the tradition is that St. Patrick converted the whole Irish people to Christianity by showing them, through the trifoliate leaf of the shamrock, how the three persons in the Godhead might exist and yet be

Lyre-Bird Stamp

In reproducing the lyre-bird on the first of its new series of stamps, Australia has chosen at once, perhaps, the best known and most elusive of antipodean birds. Its greatest claim to fame lies as much in its extraordinary powers of mimicry as in its bril liant tail feathers, the shape of which gives the bird its name. It can, and does, imitate sounds, from the mocking laugh of the hookahurra to the sawing of wood, with the most decentive accuracy imaginable. A curious habit of the lyre-hird is the building of "dancing mounds," on which it strats and minces while going through its program of mimiery. Probably the first white men to see a Igre-bird were members of an exploring party sent out. In January, 1759, from the infant settlement that later became Sydney.

"Garden of Europe"

Almost every country of Europe has some spot which enthusiasts have called "the garden of Europe," like the lake region of Italy, or Decembline in England, or Andalusia in Spain, or the Azure coast of France, but of all Europe. Helland strikes the eyes as a lald-out formal garden more than any other, especially in the spring when the bulls are abloom by the square

Why Ship Nover Landed

In September, 1920, the steamshin, South Coast, with a crew of 10, left a Pacific port loaded with white cedar lumber. Nothing was ever heard of ship or crew until the other day when a eatsup bottle with metal cap on it was picked up on the beach at Coos hay, Ore. Inside was a note with this message: "SS South Coast going down after explosion when faller blew up rough seas 0:10 p. m. Good by." It is believed a terrific explosion occurred on the ship, sluking it within a few moments and leaving no time for the erew to escape-just one of life's tragedies that always face those "who go down to the sex in ships."-- Capper's Weekly.
